my journey into health care

Lily Dohmen

MARKETING INTERN

When you are visiting Columbus Community Hospital, you may not notice the marketing office, but you do see the work the marketing team creates around the hospital building. In May, CCH hired a marketing intern, Lily Dohmen, to prepare her for her future career.

Dohmen was born and raised in Columbus. After graduating from Scotus Central Catholic High School in 2023, she continued her education at the University of Nebraska-Lincoln. Dohmen is a double major in advertising and public relations and sports media communications.

“I chose to work at CCH because, during my senior year of high school, I job shadowed the marketing team, which sparked my interest in advertising and public relations,” Dohmen said. “I wanted to work with a group of people that I knew would help me get hands-on experience.”

Lily has been a great asset and has brought fresh insight into the department.

“With the skills that I have developed, CCH has given me new opportunities in the Columbus community that have helped jumpstart my career in the marketing world,” Dohmen said.

Most days in the marketing office consist of checking emails, writing articles, conducting interviews, taking photos, creating and uploading social media posts and planning hospital events. Dohmen focuses on taking photos, writing articles and assisting in planning hospital events.

“One thing I would tell others interested in working in health care is, ‘If it never rains, you’ll never grow,’ Dohmen said. “Health care can be a challenging career to work in. But, Columbus Community Hospital has a nurturing environment to learn and grow from all the experiences you encounter.”

Outside of work, Dohmen enjoys spending time with her loved ones, shopping and reading.
